In a few words of your own, what have you heard about the changes Mayor Lee has made in Oakland?

(Open-ended: Asked of Yes Voters Only, n=419)

Verbatim Comments

Barbara Lee inherited an economic crisis with little room to grow the city and with a police department that can never seemingly reform their internal affairs issues. Oakland has incredible potential. It just needs time and money to make it work.

I read a lot about her making statements or posts about cafes she's going to. Not much in terms of policy.

Boosting police and fire staffing, plans for addressing homelessness.

Putting finances on right track, hiring good people.

She made a speech at the No Kings demonstration

I heard she partnered with San Jose and San Francisco.

I guess I don't know of any specific changes. I see her on the news around major events, anti-gun initiatives, Trump wanting to send the national guard, etc.

Made a committee to deal with city clean up.
Worked with the highway patrol for safety.

Reducing red tape for small businesses, addressing gun violence and homelessness.

I see lots of city construction and clean up happening on daily basis in downtown area.

She seems to understand the major problems of Oakland.

She is trying to create unity and hope for the future

Governance Models Tested

Description

A Strong Mayor system of governance where the Mayor can veto the city budget or ordinances. The Council would still have the power to override the Mayor's veto with a supermajority.

A hybrid form of governance where the Mayor has the power to appoint the City Administrator and the Police Chief, to propose the city budget, and to serve as the tiebreaker on Council votes. The Oakland Mayor, however, cannot veto the city budget or ordinances; these are decided by the City Council.

A Council/Manager system of governance where the Council sets policy, passes ordinances, approves budgets, and provides oversight. The mayor has more limited powers and the City Administrator manages the day-to-day of city government.
